

“In Scripture, God dwells not only up above the world but also among us, with us and within us. Our hearts long to hear more of God’s presence, his promise to be with us. One important way for us to understand God’s presence in Scripture is through its teaching about the temple and of Jesus as the true temple. Greg Beale has developed this theme cogently in scholarly writings. In God Dwells Among Us he and Mitchell Kim have made these ideas accessible to working pastors. It is a valuable aid to preaching and an excellent antidote to the feeling of loneliness that afflicts many today. I recommend it highly.”

John Frame, professor of systematic theology and philosophy, Reformed Theological Seminary

“God dwelling in the midst of his people: this staggering vision is the heart of God’s covenantal purposes from Genesis to Revelation. God Dwells Among Us brings decades of scholarship on this topic to a wider audience. More than that, it shows how this major biblical theme is the engine of mission in the world today. This clear and compelling study is a real feast.”

Michael Horton, J. Gresham Machen Professor of Systematic Theology and Apologetics, Westminster Seminary, California

GOD

DWELLS

Expanding Eden to the Ends of the Earth

AMONG

US

G. K. BEALE and
MITCHELL KIM

IVP Books

An imprint of InterVarsity Press
Downers Grove, Illinois

InterVarsity Press
P.O. Box 1400, Downers Grove, IL 60515-1426 www.ivpress.com
email@ivpress.com

©2014 by G. K. Beale and Mitchell Kim

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced in any form without written permission from InterVarsity Press.

InterVarsity Press® is the book-publishing division of InterVarsity Christian Fellowship/USA®, a movement of students and faculty active on campus at hundreds of universities, colleges and schools of nursing in the United States of America, and a member movement of the International Fellowship of Evangelical Students. For information about local and regional activities, visit www.intervarsity.org.

Scripture quotations, unless otherwise noted, are from The Holy Bible, English Standard Version, copyright © 2001 by Crossway Bibles, a division of Good News Publishers. Used by permission. All rights reserved.

While all stories in this book are true, some names and identifying information in this book have been changed to protect the privacy of the individuals involved.

Cover design: David Fassett
Interior design: Beth McGill
Images: © Lisa-BlueliStockphoto

ISBN 978-0-8308-4414-2 (print)
ISBN 978-0-8308-8016-4 (digital)

Printed in the United States of America ☺

 InterVarsity Press is committed to protecting the environment and to the responsible use of natural resources. As a member of Green Press Initiative we use recycled paper whenever possible. To learn more about the Green Press Initiative, visit www.greenpressinitiative.org.

---

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Beale, G. K. (Gregory K.), 1949-
God dwells among us : expanding Eden to the ends of the earth / G.K.
Beale and Mitchell Kim.

pages cm

Includes bibliographical references and index.
ISBN 978-0-8308-4414-2 (pbk. : alk. paper)

1. Presence of God. 2. Temple of God. 3. Eden. 4. Bible—Theology. I. Title.
BT180.P6B43 2014
220.6'4—dc22

---

2014033345

---

|   |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |   |   |
|---|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|---|---|
| P | 20 | 19 | 18 | 17 | 16 | 15 | 14 | 13 | 12 | 11 | 10 | 9  | 8  | 7  | 6  | 5  | 4  | 3  | 2 | 1 |
| Y | 31 | 30 | 29 | 28 | 27 | 26 | 25 | 24 | 23 | 22 | 21 | 20 | 19 | 18 | 17 | 16 | 15 | 14 |   |   |

CONTENTS

|   |     |
|---|-----|
| Preface . . . . .   | 7   |
| Abbreviations . . . . .   | 11  |
| Introduction . . . . .  | 13  |
| 1 Eden as a Temple . . . . .The Context of Genesis 1–2   | 17  |
| 2 Expanding Eden . . . . .The Call in Genesis 1:26–28  | 29  |
| 3 Eden Lost? . . . . .The Call to the Patriarchs After the Fall                                  | 39  |
| 4 Eden Remixed. . . . .The Tabernacle in a Context of Sin  | 51  |
| 5 Eden Restored. . . . .Promise of the Expansion of Eden in the Prophets                         | 65  |
| 6 Eden Rebuilt . . . . .Jesus as the New Temple in the Gospels                                   | 79  |
| 7 Eden Expanding . . . . .The Church as the New Temple   | 99  |
| 8 Eden’s Ministry . . . . .Serving as Priests in the New Temple                                  | 113 |
| 9 Eden Completely Expanded. . . . .The New Heavens and New Earth in Revelation 21:1–4            | 135 |
| 10 “Why Haven’t I Seen This Before?” . . . . .Seeing the Purpose of God’s Dwelling Place in Eden | 147 |

|   |     |
|---|-----|
| II Concluding Practical Reflections . . . . .                                 | 157 |
| Foundational Convictions for Sacrificial Mission    in the Temple |     |
| Notes . . . . .   | 167 |
| Bibliography . . . . .  | 199 |
| Scripture Index . . . . .   | 207 |
| Ancient Literature Index . . . . .  | 213 |

Preface

Why did we write this book? We pray that its biblical-theological perspective might fuel the church to fulfill its mission in the world. In writing this book, we see more clearly than ever that the themes of Eden, the temple, God's glorious presence, new creation, and the mission of the church are ultimately facets of the same reality. More specifically, we hope to build a bridge from the world of biblical theology to the needs of the church. The substance and basic thesis of the book is distilled from G. K. Beale, The Temple and the Church's Mission: A Biblical Theology of the Dwelling Place of God.<sup>1</sup> The original book spanned from Genesis to Revelation, exploring both the ancient Near Eastern and Second Temple Jewish views of the temple. More extensive argumentation from the biblical text as well as the surrounding world can be found in that original book. However, the basic thesis of this book was then developed into a seven-week sermon series preached by Mitchell Kim at Living Water Alliance Church in Chicagoland, and then condensed into a seminar given at different conferences.

Writing and speaking are two very different mediums. Writing gives liberty to provide in-depth substantiation and explore secondary lines of support for an argument. Preaching demands a laser-like focus on communicating a single point. Adapting the considerable substance of the original temple book to preaching demanded a radical reduction in order to communicate orally. Translating the preached sermons back to a written format allowed a significant amplification and deepening of the preached material while we attempted to maintain the vibrancy and focus of preaching. Some material has been lifted verbatim from the original book; most has been reworked and reworded to communicate more concisely and clearly. Our hope is that the biblical-theological heft of the original will be combined with practical insight to spark a greater zeal and passion for mission by God's people in the world.

There has been somewhat of a hermeneutical shift from the original book to this one. In the original book, G. K. Beale tried to sketch the development of the temple idea through each of the various distinct redemptive-historical epochs (Eden/Noahic/Patriarchal/Israel [Mount Sinai→wilderness tabernacle→Jerusalem temple]/inaugurated latter days/consummated latter days) in order to see how they related to and built on one another. However, because of the condensed nature of this book, we sometimes merge the meaning of the temple in earlier epochs with the developed meaning from later epochs (especially in the earlier chapters). In cases of any ambiguity, the reader should consult the original book.

God has often used our wives to help our theology connect into the realities of daily life. We are both deeply indebted to our wives, Dorinda Beale and Eunsil Kim, who have not only discussed the theology of the temple with us, but also forced us to live out this theology by bringing the presence of God into our homes. They have been crucial in helping us to understand this topic in more depth. In writing this book, we have personally lived out its call to "Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth" (Gen 1:28), as God has blessed us with children and grandchildren! Greg Beale had a granddaughter, Eden Klamm, and Mitch Kim had a daughter, Eden River Kim. Their names reflect our prayers for these children: that they would abound with life in the presence of God and serve to expand that presence to the ends of the earth.

Too many other people deserve mention in this book. Don Carson, made a significant investment in reading and carefully evaluating the original book. His suggestions for revision have definitely made this a better book than it would have been! Brannon Ellis at InterVarsity Press has helped to translate its academic depth to communicate to a broader swath of God's people. His gracious and encouraging input throughout the journey has been invaluable.

Above all, we are thankful to God for the idea for this book and for giving the energy and discipline to write it. We pray that God's glory might be clearly seen through all who read it.

A few comments about some stylistic aspects of the book are in order. English translations follow the English Standard Version or, when different, have been identified as our own translation. With respect to all translations of ancient works, when the translation differs from the standard editions usually referred to, then it is our translation or someone else's (in the latter case we indicate whom).

Dedicated to Eden Kim and Eden Klamm with all our other children (Stephen, Nancy, Hannah, Elise and Ana) that they might abide as an overflow from God's dwelling place to the ends of the earth.

Abbreviations

|       |  |
|-------|--|
| NIGTC | New International Greek Testament Commentary     |
| NIVAC | New International Version Application Commentary |
| NSBT  | New Studies in Biblical Theology                 |
| WBC   | Word Biblical Commentary                         |

Introduction

Before departing for Burma at twenty-four, Adoniram Judson's "deep conviction . . . to engage in this [missionary] service" was to be "devoted to this work for life, whenever God in His providence shall open the way."<sup>1</sup> His convictions were tested for thirty-eight years in Burma, through the loss of two wives, seven of thirteen children, and terrible sickness at sea that led to his death. In the face of constant persecution and imprisonment, he not only finished a Burmese-English dictionary and grammar but also translated the entire New Testament into Burmese. After ten years, he had one church of eighteen believers. Nevertheless, this crucible of suffering tempered and strengthened Judson's convictions:

The path of self-denial is, to carnal eyes, a veiled path, a mystery of the divine kingdom . . . but if thou wilt do what thy hands find to do this hour . . . thou shalt find the path of self-denial open most wonderfully and delightfully before thee; thou shalt find it sweet to follow thy dear Lord and Saviour, bearing the cross, and shalt soon be enabled to say,—“Sweet is the cross, above all sweets, To souls enamored with thy smiles.”<sup>2</sup>

Even on his deathbed, he said, “No one has ever left the world with more inviting prospects, with brighter hopes, or warmer feelings—warmer feelings.”<sup>3</sup> Deep conviction formed the bedrock of his sacrificial yet joy-filled labor. Today, Burma (known today as Myanmar) has over four million Christians because of that sacrifice.

Is such costly sacrifice an antiquated throwback to a distant past? Today, short-term missions teams can hop on an airplane, care for impoverished orphans in rural China for a week and stop by Starbucks in Beijing before returning to give a missions report in their comfortable church. Even as globalization has eased some of the demands of short-term missions, the challenges for missions today continue to be daunting. More than three thousand unreached and unengaged people groups remain today; they are in some of the hardest to reach places of the world, and they total almost 250 million people.<sup>4</sup> We must go. We must persevere even when we see little fruit.

Even in “Christian America,” those with no religious affiliation are the fastest-growing religious group today, growing 28 percent between 2007 and 2012.<sup>5</sup> Both unreached people groups and the increasingly resistant West will only be penetrated by the gospel with great sacrifice and cost.

Will we make the sacrifice that mission demands? Recent studies of American young people are not encouraging. The goal of their faith is primarily “feeling good, happy, secure, at peace” because they desire “subjective well-being, being able to resolve problems, and getting along amiably with other people.”<sup>6</sup> If Judson’s goal was “subjective well-being,” Burma would remain in darkness today! Given the current challenges of settling into the sacrificial challenges of marriage and career,<sup>7</sup> how much more challenging will it be to embrace the sacrifices of global mission among the least-reached peoples on earth?

Compelling conviction propels us through painful sacrifice. The goal of this book is to strengthen biblical conviction for sacrificial mission. When we are motivated to mission through occasional experiences or isolated Bible verses, the springs of such motivation can run dry in the face of costly challenges. Persevering mission demands fullorbed conviction that is borne out of careful and prayerful study of God's Word. Our conviction grows richer and stronger when grounded in God's cosmic mission from Genesis to Revelation. In the next section, we will summarize the purpose and progress of God's mission throughout the Bible that the rest of the book will flesh out.

BIBLICAL CONVICTION FOR SACRIFICIAL MISSION

In military combat, a mission's objectives are articulated through "commander's intent." The US Army has realized that battle plans often became useless ten minutes into the battle because the enemy does not follow the plan. When the opposing force threw off the "script," troops and officers on the ground became paralyzed about what to do next. The commander's intent addresses the problem by distilling the entire battle plan into a simple statement that would give soldiers the freedom and flexibility to improvise without getting off track. This directive helps soldiers adjust fluidly to changing conditions on the battlefield without losing sight of the objective.<sup>8</sup>

Like soldiers on the field, Christians must know their commander's intent. In order to fulfill our commander's intent in the changing and challenging situations of our lives, we must take time to form a compelling biblical picture of it.

The Bible articulates our commander's intent by painting a picture of our "mission accomplished" in Revelation 21–22. In the closing chapters of Revelation, the new heaven and earth (Rev 21:1) is juxtaposed against a lengthy description of the new Jerusalem (Rev 21:1–22:5). Why does John only briefly mention "a new heaven and a new earth" before extensively describing the new Jerusalem? Probably John looks at the same picture from two different angles so that the resulting images interpret each another. Such juxtaposed images often interpret each another in Revelation (e.g., Rev 5:5–6, 7–13; 21:1–3).<sup>9</sup> The new heaven and earth remind us of the expansive scope of the new creation, while the new Jerusalem highlights its purpose as a dwelling place for God. In this way, Revelation 21 pictures the entire cosmos and new creation as the dwelling place of God.

This picture in Revelation 21–22 fulfills the mission given in Genesis 1–2, and the progress of this mission can be traced throughout the entire Bible. In Genesis 1–2, Eden is the dwelling place of God, and God commissions Adam and Eve to expand the boundaries of that dwelling place to fill the earth (Gen 1:28). While God’s original call seemed to be thwarted by sin in Genesis 3, God continues to establish his dwelling place among the patriarchs until the construction of the tabernacle and temple. After the destruction of Solomon’s temple, the prophets anticipate the coming of a new and expanding temple, and these prophecies begin to be fulfilled in Jesus and the church. The church as the dwelling place of God must expand until one day it fills the entire heaven and earth; the entire cosmos becomes the dwelling place of God. Mission does not begin with the Great Commission of Matthew 28:18–20, but mission is God’s heartbeat from Genesis 1 until the new heaven and earth become the dwelling place of the Lord God Almighty in Revelation 21–22. This ultimate picture of the whole earth filled with God’s presence fulfills God’s original intention from the sanctuary of Eden. We begin, therefore, with Eden.

Eden as a Temple

The Context of Genesis 1–2

Longing. We are creatures of longing. When we misdiagnose the object of this longing, then we become frustrated and disappointed. Our longings for relationship often get frustrated in conflict. Our longings for satisfaction get frustrated in discontent. Our longings for significance get frustrated by our own inadequacies. J. R. R. Tolkien diagnoses the roots of our longing: “We all long for [Eden], and we are constantly glimpsing it: our whole nature at its best and least corrupted, its gentlest and most humane, is still soaked with a sense of ‘exile.’”<sup>1</sup> The longings of our hearts are frustrated from this exile, but these longings are properly satisfied in the dwelling place of God originally found in Eden. God’s presence in his dwelling place satiates our longings for relationship, satisfaction and significance, and the opening chapters of Genesis show how God intended those longings to be properly satisfied—in Eden. God made us for himself as his images in the Garden-temple in Eden (Gen 1–2). God’s presence gives life and purpose in Eden, so we should not wonder that “our hearts are restless until they find their rest in Him.”<sup>2</sup> In this chapter, we will explore how Eden is presented as a temple and dwelling place of God, satisfying our longings for life and purpose.

EDEN AS A DWELLING PLACE OF GOD

Eden is presented as a sanctuary and place where God dwells, as seen in Genesis 1–2 and the wider witness of the Old Testament.<sup>3</sup> Even the seemingly casual mention of God “walking” in the Garden of Eden (Gen 3:8) is rich with connotations that suggest God’s presence in the temple. In Leviticus 26, the Lord promises that he will “walk” among them and be their God (Lev 26:12). In Deuteronomy 23, the Lord commands the Israelites to keep their camp holy because he “walks” in the midst of their camp (Deut 23:14). When David plans to build a temple in 2 Samuel 7, the Lord reminds him that “I have been walking about in a tent [the tabernacle!] for my dwelling” (2 Sam 7:6, translation altered). In a similar manner, the Lord is “walking” in Eden (Gen 3:8) because Eden itself was the temple and dwelling place of God.

More explicitly, Ezekiel calls Eden a temple, referring to it as “the garden of God . . . the holy mountain of God” containing “sanctuaries” (Ezek 28:13–14, 16, 18). “Mountain” and “sanctuaries” are both references elsewhere to the temple.<sup>4</sup> Ezekiel also speaks of an Adam-like person in Eden wearing bejeweled clothing like a priest (Ezek 28:13, alluding to Ex 28:17–20) whose sin profanes the sanctuaries and causes him to be cast out (Ezek 28:17–18).<sup>5</sup> Therefore, the Garden of Eden is most explicitly called a temple with an Adam-like figure as its priest in Ezekiel 28:18.

A number of other lines of evidence help us see Eden as the first temple. The ark in the Holy of Holies, which contained the Law (which led to wisdom), echoes the tree of the knowledge of good and evil (which also led to wisdom). Both the touching of the ark and the partaking of the tree’s fruit resulted in death. The entrance to Eden was from the east (Gen 3:24), just as the entrance to the temple was from the east (e.g., Ezek 40:6). Both Eden and the temple are characterized by the holy presence of God that brings wisdom.

God’s presence in Eden is associated with images of life and purpose found in the Garden. The imagery in Eden paints a compelling picture of the satisfaction of basic human desires in God's presence. For example, the desire for life is satisfied by the waters of the river of life and the fruit of the tree of life. The need for purpose is fulfilled in Adam's priestly call to work and keep the Garden-temple (Gen 2:15; see Num 18:5). Parallels between Eden and the tabernacle/temple further demonstrate that our desire for life and purpose are properly satisfied in God's presence.

EDEN AND THE LONGING FOR SATISFACTION: THE TREE AND RIVER OF LIFE

In the concise narrative of Genesis 2, six verses describe the tree of life and the river flowing out of Eden (Gen 2:9-14). Is sacred Scripture "wasting" precious space here? In actuality such seemingly trivial details, easily skipped by a hasty reader, brim with the significance of life found in the presence of God. The verdant imagery of Eden, especially its trees and rivers, reflects abundant life in God's presence, and this verdant imagery is mirrored in the later tabernacle and temple.

The tree of life. Gen 2:9: And out of the ground the Lord God made to spring up every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food. The tree of life was in the midst of the garden, and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil.

The "tree of life" stood in the middle of the Garden, and the fruit of this tree would give life forever (Gen 3:22). Why? Proverbs 3 shows us that God's wisdom is compared to the "tree of life" and that his wisdom shines light on the paths of life and peace for God's people (Prov 3:16-18). Similarly, in the tabernacle and temple this "tree of life" served as the model for the lampstand outside the Holy of Holies, since the presence of God would shine light on the paths of life for his people. This lampstand looked like a small tree trunk with seven protruding branches with flowering almond blossoms (Ex 25:31-40; 37:17-24), a picture of the life-giving fruitfulness that is found in God's presence.<sup>6</sup>

Abundant life is seen not only in the tree itself but also in the verdant imagery of the Garden, since "out of the ground the LORD God made to spring up every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food" (Gen 2:9). Solomon's temple also abounds with such verdant imagery (1 Kings 6:18, 29, 32, 35; 7:18-20).<sup>7</sup> The end-time temple overflows with life, as trees of life grow on the banks of the river of life to bring healing for the nations (Ezek 47:12; Rev 22:2; see discussion below). The abundance of life found in the Garden paints a picture of the abundance found in the tabernacling presence of God. God's presence overflows with life.

The river of life. Gen 2:10-14: A river flowed out of Eden to water the garden, and there it divided and became four rivers. The name of the first is the Pishon. It is the one that flowed around the whole land of Havilah, where there is gold. And the gold of that land is good; bdellium and onyx stone are there. The name of the second river is the Gihon. It is the one that flowed around the whole land of Cush. And the name of the third river is the Tigris, which flows east of Assyria. And the fourth river is the Euphrates.

A seemingly incidental reference to a river flowing out of Eden also reminds us of the abundant life flowing from the presence of God. This river in Eden gives life to the many trees growing on its banks, including the tree of the knowledge of good and evil and the tree of life (Gen 2:10, 17; 3:24). This water flows out of Eden to water the Garden before flowing outward to give life to the rest of the earth and places where nations would reside (Gen 2:10-14). Similarly, in later depictions of the temple, a river flows with trees of life on its banks. In Ezekiel 47, a river flows from below the threshold of the temple with trees on the banks of both sides. The waters of this river make seawater fresh (Ezek 47:8), give life to creatures (Ezek 47:9), and cause leaves of healing to blossom on the trees of its banks (Ezek 47:12). In Revelation, a river flows in the new Jerusalem, with “the tree of life with its twelve kinds of fruit, yielding its fruit each month” and “the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations” (Rev 22:1-2). This river flows from the presence of God (“from the throne of God and of the Lamb”) outward to bring life to the surrounding nations.

This river of life abounding with God’s presence flows from the inmost place of God’s presence outward into the nations. In the temple, God’s holiness is supremely manifest in the Holy of Holies and spreads outward to the Holy Place and then the outer court, where all Israel could assemble for worship and which symbolized, as we will see, the whole world. In the eschatological temple, the river flows from the Holy of Holies into the temple courts and then the nations outside (Ezek 47:1; Rev 22:1). In Eden, the river flows from God’s presence in Eden into the Garden and then the rest of the earth, where nations would eventually reside (Gen 2:10-14). A gradation of holiness is seen in Eden and the temple as the presence of God increases from the innermost place of Eden/Holy of Holies outward to the earth and the lands where nations would live.

As a result, this gradation of holiness is evident in the parallels between Eden and the temple. Just as the Holy Place contained the lampstand shaped like the tree of life and the bread of the presence to sustain the priests, so the Garden of Eden is the place of the tree of life (Gen 2:8-9) and provides food to sustain Adam (Gen 2:16). Just as the outer court of Israel’s second temple provided a place for the nations to come, so the land and seas to be subdued by Adam outside the Garden are the nations of Cush and Assyria (Gen 2:13-14); though, of course, these lands were not yet populated with peoples.<sup>8</sup> The parallels can be seen in the following diagram:

---

Figure 1

Since the river of life flows from God's presence into the lands of nations, so our mission to the nations must flow from the life found in God's presence. When the source of our commitment to mission is located only in the backwaters of our idealism, then we can burn out and become bitter. Many idealistically plunge headlong into a sacrificial commitment to the poor or unreached or hurting, compelled by brokenness over their plight, but the resources of that idealism run dry when tested by the challenges of costly obedience. However, when our resources run dry, we drink more fully and deeply from the abundance of life found in God's presence. Our God gives joy and strength to endure! The life that we find in God's presence is more than enough to overcome every challenge for the mission God has placed before us. However, life must clearly flow from God's presence into the needs of the nations, and the needs of the nations must drive us to drink more fully from the life found in God's presence.

Just outside the Garden, the river is surrounded with land that abounds with good gold, bdellium and onyx stone (Gen 2:12). Each of these marks life in the presence of God. "Pure gold, like clear glass" covers the temple (Rev 21:18, 21), just as the sacred furniture in the tabernacle was made of gold. Polished gold reflects light, just as we will reflect God's light when we live in the presence of God. Bdelium is a fragrant substance, with the appearance of manna (Num 11:7), which was kept in the ark of the covenant in the Holy of Holies. Indeed, God's presence sustains and strengthens us, as the manna did for Israel in the wilderness (Ps 78:24-25; Jn 6:58). Onyx stones are prevalent in the temple, especially on the breastpiece of the high priest where the names of the sons of Israel were engraved (Ex 25:7; 28:9), reflecting their identity and preciousness before God. In this way, this abundant imagery reminds us how God's presence brings life so that our hearts may not corrode with sin, our lives are sustained with strength and our identities might be properly grounded in our preciousness before him.

Psalm 36 interprets the river from God's presence in Eden as a picture of the abundant life found there:

How precious is your steadfast love, O God!
The children of mankind take refuge in the shadow of your wings.
They feast on the abundance of your house [temple], and you give them drink from the river of your delights [literally "Edens"].
For with you is the fountain of life;
in your light do we see light. (Ps 36:7-9)

In God's presence and in the temple, the river of Eden flows to bring the fountain of life. God's presence brings life and light. Since true life and sustenance are found in the presence of God, we must regularly drink deeply from the river of his delights. In our weariness, though, we often seek life from entertainment, empty friendships and ceaseless activity, which all fail to bring life. So many of our "recreational" activities fail to re-create the inner resources of our soul to face the challenges of each day. Like the Israelites before us, we forsake the river of God's presence and hew out empty cisterns that do not hold water to satisfy our thirsts (Jer 2:13). Will we satisfy our soul at the fountain of living waters? Or will we hew out cisterns of putrid water that do not satisfy? The rivers of life flowing from the presence of God in Eden beckon us to the satisfaction and re-creation of these refreshing waters that are only found in the presence of God.

We sacrifice for what satisfies. The soul-satisfying riches in the presence of God propel us out of our comfort zones, calling us out of the warm confines of our beds to our knees in early-morning prayer and meditation on God's Word. Only these soul-satisfying riches can sustain us in the rigors of God's calling on our lives as we move out to proclaim his name to the nations across the street and across the globe. A heart for mission grows out of a soul that finds satisfaction in God's presence, the riches of which can be seen in the imagery of Eden.

EDEN AND THE LONGING FOR PURPOSE

God placed Adam in Eden to work it and keep it (Gen 2:15), a priestly work in the Garden-temple of Eden. His "work" is not only working the soil (Gen 2:5) but serving God (e.g., Deut 4:19), and he keeps the Garden (Gen 2:15) as he keeps God's commands (see Lev 18:5) and guards it from pollution and corruption (see Num 1:53). The verbs to work and to keep are sometimes used together outside Genesis 2:15 in a priestly context:

And you shall keep guard over the sanctuary and over the altar, that there may never again be wrath on the people of Israel. And behold, I have taken your brothers the Levites from among the people of Israel. They are a gift to you, given to the LORD, to do the work of the tent of meeting.<sup>9</sup> (Num 18:5-6, translation altered)

In this passage, the priests are to keep the sanctuary from corruption and defilement and do the work of service in the tabernacle. In the same way, Adam serves God in the temple as a priest and keeps the Garden-temple from corruption. Similarly, Ezekiel 28:13 shows Adam in Eden, clothed like a priest with “every precious stone,” stones that correspond to the precious stones on the ephod of Israel’s high priest (Ex 28:17-21).<sup>10</sup>

This understanding of Adam’s work is confirmed by observing the next verses in Genesis 2. After being commanded to work and keep the Garden, Adam is told:

And the LORD God commanded the man, saying, “You may surely eat of every tree of the garden, but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die.” (Gen 2:16-17)

After Adam is commanded to keep the Garden, he is also instructed to keep God’s commands. Just as the priests were to keep guard over the temple (Num 18:5) by obeying God’s commands, so Adam as a priest guards the Garden-temple of Eden by keeping God’s commands. Adam works out God’s priestly purposes through obedience to his word.

Adam failed in his service as the first priest to guard God’s temple, which included guarding the Garden-temple from the intrusion of the serpent who was outside.<sup>11</sup> The serpent slithered into the Garden with deceptive words: “Did God actually say, ‘You shall not eat of any tree in the garden?’” (Gen 3:1). Through doubt, the serpent undermined God’s word. Eve’s reply to the serpent shows that the serpent succeeded in his plot. Notice the subtle differences between God’s word in Genesis 2:16-17 and the woman’s reply in Genesis 3:2-3:

Table 1.1

| Genesis 2:16-17   | Genesis 3:2-3  |
|---|--|
| And the LORD God commanded the man, saying, “You may surely eat of every tree of the garden, but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die [literally, “ dying you shall die ”].” | And the woman said to the serpent, “We may eat of the fruit of the trees in the garden, but God said, ‘You shall not eat of the fruit of the tree that is in the midst of the garden, neither shall you touch it , lest you die.’” |

First, the name of God is changed from “the LORD [Yahweh] God” to “God.” While this does not sound like much in English, “the LORD God” is the personal name of God that signifies an intimate and covenantal relationship, while “God” is the God of power who created all things (Elohim). While Genesis 2 presents the LORD God issuing commands in covenant relationship to his special people, Eve appears to look at this personal God from a distance in Genesis 3. Next, God’s permission is minimized. While God lavishly allows to “eat of every tree of the garden,” Eve reduces this gracious invitation to “the fruit of the trees of the garden” and minimizes God’s generous invitation. Also God’s prohibition is maximized. God commanded that they could not eat only from one tree, but Eve adds, “neither shall you touch it.” She becomes the first legalist and makes God’s commands seem more strict than they actually are. Finally the consequences of sin are minimized. God says, “you shall surely die” (literally, “dying you shall die”) but Eve only says, “lest you die.”<sup>12</sup>

Adam and Eve failed to guard the Garden of God through obedience to God’s word. The serpent undermined confidence in God’s word, and consequently undermined confidence in God himself. John Calvin rightly says,

And surely, once we hold God’s Word in contempt, we shake off all reverence for him! . . . For Adam would never have dared oppose God’s authority unless he had disbelieved in God’s Word. Here, indeed, was the best bridle to control all passions: the thought that nothing is better than to practice righteousness by obeying God’s commandments; then, that the ultimate goal of the happy life is to be loved by him. Therefore Adam, carried away by the devil’s blasphemies, as far as he was able extinguished the whole glory of God.<sup>13</sup>

When the protection of God’s word is removed, the temptations of this world grow far stronger. In Genesis 3:6, Eve is overwhelmed with temptation as she “saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was a delight to her eyes, and that the tree was to be desired to make one wise.” The desire for food, the delight of the eyes and the craving for wisdom are all strong and, in their proper context, legitimate desires. The desires of our flesh may be legitimate, but Eve sought to satisfy them in illegitimate ways. However, the bridle of God’s word protects the wild horses of our desires from destroying us.

Adam and Eve failed in their purpose and priestly calling to guard the Garden-temple from intruders by not keeping God’s word. Eden is a place where purpose is given to humanity (Gen 2:15; see Gen 1:28). We will see later that as God’s presence is restored through the sacrifice of Jesus, our purpose is also restored as a kingdom of priests and a holy nation, serving in God’s true end-time temple (1 Pet 2:4-9). The longing for purpose found in the human heart is satisfied when life works according to its purpose, which is life lived in the presence of God. Just as Adam and Eve were to submit to God’s word to fulfill their mission in guarding God’s dwelling place, so we must submit to God’s Word to fulfill our mission in guarding and expanding God’s dwelling place to fill the earth.

CONCLUSION

In this chapter, we see Eden as the first temple and place of God’s presence. As a result, Eden is a place of satisfaction of life. However, sin closed off the way back to God’s presence in Eden. Because Adam and Eve fail to guard the temple by sinning and letting in an unclean serpent to defile the temple, they lose their priestly role, and the two cherubim take over the responsibility to “guard” the Garden-temple (Gen 3:24).<sup>14</sup>

Who will open the way back into God’s tabernacling presence? Are we endlessly condemned to our lives east of Eden? Jesus opens up the way back into God’s presence by the sacrifice of his body (Heb 10:19-20). As a result, the life-giving waters that flowed in Eden now flow in and through those who believe in Jesus, becoming “a spring of water welling up to eternal life” (Jn 4:13-14). Just as the river “flowed out of Eden” to the lands of the later surrounding nations of Assyria and Cush (Gen 2:10), so those who believe in Jesus not only drink of living waters, but a spring of living water overflows into the nations around them (Jn 7:37-39), as we will see more fully later.

We have established in this chapter that Eden was the first place of worship, since it was where God’s presence dwelt and the only place where satisfaction in God could be found. God’s plan was not static, but Adam was to expand Eden until it filled the whole earth. How? In the next chapter, we will explore how God’s purpose for worship in Eden would overflow in mission to the ends of the earth.